But have you ever stepped on one of those suckers!?!? "OUCH! After stepping on too many Legos we decided we needed a better storage solution ³ them. Something that was easy to keep and something that could leave all over the floor. Â is when my husband came up with these drawers under the Lego storage bed that are easily rolled in and out of under the bed and are very resistant. You can also use them for other things like clothes, toys, etc. We want to show you how ³ made them so you can also make them! Enjoy the tutorial! (this post contains affiliate links) Supplies: *Please note that these are the supplies and the amount of wood we use for our two drawers, but you will need to adjust ³ the space under your bed. Height, length and The width can be different, so make sure you take all your measurements first and adjust the size of your drawers accordingly! This is how much you need 2 drawers. Our measurements under the bed were 42-1/2ÂeÂ 3 wide by 75ÂeÂ 3 long by 9-1/2ÂeÂ 3 high. Plywood (1 piece 4 ft. x 8 ft.) Brushed wooden boards (for front panels Â(1) 8ft. 7-1/4Âe3 x 3/4Âe3 piece, for side panels Â(2) 12ft. 5-1/2Âe3 x 3/4Âe3 pieces, for interior panels (1) 8ft. 3-1/2Âe3x3/4Âe3 piece) We didn't get the Home Depot wood. Most of the wood sizes are rounded to the nearest inch, the sizes you mention are CURRENT sizes if you measure the table with a ruler. In the store they can be labeled 7Â A 1, 6Â A 1, or 4Â A 1, so see a rule with you! White contact paper (Amazon)/scissors White paint/brush/roller White duck tape (optional, see link above) Fixed wheels (port load) 1-1/2Âe3 or 2ÂeÂ 3 screws, 1/2Âe3 wheel screws (see image below) 2 Handles drawers with screws Tools: Drill, miter saw, circular saw. Other: Ruler, tape, Pen Steps: First design your plywood and measure and mark ³ where it will have to cut. Use your circular saw to trim 2-34-1/2ÂeÂ 3x38-3/4ÂeÂ 3 straight for the base of your drawers. Then ³ and cut all the pieces of wood for the sides of your drawers. See the measurements in section ³ "Supplies" above. Then paint all your boards, one side at a time. Flip when dry and paint the other side. Continue to this tutorial once all your tables are dry. As it will look like your cut piecesÂeÂ Â Now cover your plywood with your roll of adhesive contact paper. First cut 2 pieces long enough to cover the board. After measuring the amount you need (make sure it overlaps slightly in the center and enough to wrap around the edges). Slowly peel off one end of the seat-back and fix around the edge, then slowly continue to pull back press the adhesive side down on the wood. Continue until wood is covered. Then repeat with the other piece. We used white duck tape to secure the edges at the bottom (where the edges did not stay well down). Now it's time to start putting the sides together. You You You go pre-drill each hole before screwing together (keep that in mind as you go). Start by screwing the 3 sides together. 2 screws at each corner. Now measure and fix the centerpiece, making sure it is all square. Screw the place from the outside. This is what you will have so far, place your face face down a) With your sides face down, put your face covered with plywood down on top of it. Screw your plywood along the edges (7 screws in total Â one in each corner and in the centers) Now gather your wheels, short screws and front piece of wood. Here are the screws we use â And the wheels â Screw each wheel down using 2 screws each, 1 wheel in each corner a couple of inches from the edge. This is how it will look with the 4 wheels coupled (see photo below). Also drill a screw into the center of the board where your cross goes through the other side. This will keep your board stable in the center and won't collapse over time or bend when the kids decide to climb into the drawer! Now place the front piece along the open front edge. You will want to make the top bluish with the covers of the sides that are touching the ground. Screw 2 screws on the front piece holding it to the sides. Turn the drawer backwards and place your small piece in the middle and screw it in place (one screw on the front and one on the back) Âe Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Now grab your handle and the screws that came with Âe Â Â! Mark on your dashboard in the center. Next, pre-drill your holes and then screw them in place. Good Â! Grab your brush and a little paint and paint over all your screws exposed. If you want them to be softer, you can caulk the screws first and let them dry and then paint over them. Now step back and admire your practical work!! (or should I say "Your husband" It's a job Â) Now roll under the bed â Add Legos! It's easy for kids to get in and out during play time! Our son loves his new Lego drawers! We hope you too!
